ABOUT IRRIGATION.Report of Colonel Edward S. Nettleton, Chief Engineer.NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—The Times has the following special:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Colonel Edwin S. Nettleton, chief engineer of the irrigation investigation, has completed his report on the season's work. His commission having expired, he is now out of the service of the government and his staff has been disbanded till congress passes some of the bills which have been introduced.

Colonel Nettleton's investigations embraced a strip of country from the Manitoba line to the Gulf of Mexico, and from Minnesota to the Pacific coast. He declares that the artesian basin of the James river valley is the largest ever discovered. While it underlies that valley from one end to the other, it extends far beyond the west side and covers altogether about 40,000 square miles, or a body larger than the state of Ohio. The truth of this is fully established by the character of wells that have been drilled in all parts of the basin, and on either side of it. The artesian rock of that immense basin tips to the north, though the pitch is not continual.
The water is struck at a depth of from 500 to 600 feet at Yankton, or along the northern lines of Nebraska, and at 1500 to 1750 feet at Devils lake in North Dakota and between that place and the Manitoba line. The bottom of the well at Devils lake is 1520 feet from the surface and 47 feet below the level of the sea. The Yankton well is 1200 feet above the sea level. The bottom is 644 feet above sea level. The dip of the artesian rock from Yankton to Devils lake is thus shown to be about 700 feet.

The opinion prevails that the basin lies wholly between the Missouri and Red rivers, but Prof. Nettleton dissipates that notion. It is demonstrated that the eastern line of the great reservoir is west of the Minnesota boundary, but it extends a long distance west of the Missouri river. The same body of water is struck at Mandan, Chamberlin, and at points almost as far west as Deadwood. It can be reached anywhere in the Costeaus or Bad Lands.
The Red river valley, between Fargo and the Manitoba line, now has between 400 and 500 drift wells. By this system a flow of water is obtained by drilling on an average about 200 feet. The supply is inexhaustible, but the flow is nothing like that of the artesian basin to the west. The water which the Red river valley people are obtaining is carried between layers of rock and clay which pitch to the eastward. While the same water can be found as far west as the James river and even beyond, it requires the depression of the Red river valley to make it available. From 427 of those Red river valley wells there is a constant flow of 4585 gallons per minute, an amount sufficient to cover twenty acres to a depth of 1 foot in twenty-four hours. The professor is an enthusiast on the subject of irrigation, and advises all farmers to use it, even if they can do no better than to employ a cheap windmill in ordinary wells for the irrigation of truck gardens. He says that every farmer on the prairies should store the surplus water. The point is that irrigation, even on the smallest scale, is important.

Wanted Morphine and "Jim."

MOBERLY, Mo., Jan. 25.—A young lady of 28 years, neatly dressed, came here Saturday and registered at a hotel as Myrtle Williams, Nevada, Mo. She was sick all night, and today wandered for several hours about the streets.
About 2 p. m. she knocked at the door of the prosecuting attorney and asked for a doctor. Seeing her condition, the lawyer invited her in, gave her a seat and sent for a doctor. When the doctor came she asked for morphine. She calls constantly for "Jim" and says he, Jim, is a farmer near Nevada, Mo., but refuses to give his other name. No one here knows her. She has on a brown cloak, brown hat and feather and is evidently a well-educated woman. She will be properly cared for pending an investigation.

THIS IS STRAIGHT GOODS

And a Real Chance to Save Good Money.

Jones & Goodloe are advertising to sell their immense stock of goods, except Dunlap hats and Scriven's drawers, at cost. To leave no doubt of the reality of the matter they have given away their cost mark word and it hangs conspicuously displayed in big letters where every one can see it.
A would-be purchaser can look at a suit of clothes and up at the cost word and tell just what the cost is.
This is the first time this was ever done in Waco. It leaves no doubt in the mind. The cost mark is on every suit and the key to it hangs in plain sight, and the whole business is in the hands of the purchaser. In advertised cost sales where the word of the proprietor is the only surety men will always doubt, but Jones & Goodloe have put doubt out of the question by revealing this cubalistic word which merchants use in marking their goods.
This is a real bona fide cost sale, new and refreshing. There are real genuine big bargains to be had, and every man who needs a suit of clothes or mother who desires one for her boys can save money now, sure. It takes only a minute or two to read the cost mark and any one reading them will buy. It is no more than truth to say that such bargains in clothing were never offered before in Waco. The same applies to other goods.
